Supplemental Crops.
By B. Walker McKee, Fryeburg.
The question of supplemental crops for the pasture and the hay crop has been growing in importance for many years. With the advance in the price of all kinds of grain on the one hand, and the frequent occurrence of droughts on the other, Maine farmers are warned that they must be active in furnishing these crops or suffer seriously in the growth of their animals and the output of their dairies, not for one or two months but for the entire year.
Each year's experience and observation lead me to feel more strongly in favor of the silo, as the chief source of this supplemental food. I have fed silage for eleven months in the year with the best of results; and by so doing have been freed from the trouble and extra labor involved in the growing and feeding of silage crops, in rotation.
Corn is the ideal crop to feed to supplement pastures because the grass on a closely cropped pasture has a high protein content and the starches of the corn plant balance it finely. But if the silo is to be the main reliance, the crop rotation must be planned somewhat accordingly. In the sweet corn growing districts, this problem solves itself, and in others, where potatoes may be the cash crop, a large growing variety of corn to be ensilaged without removing the ears, will yield a far larger amount of food units per acre and thus, partially at least, offset the money value of the sweet corn.
With the advent of the home-constructed, continuous-door, stave silo, the common use of the corn harvester and the present low price of silage cutting machinery, the way is made easy indeed for the small farmer even, through co-operation, to raise and store the amount of silage necessary for this purpose. But there are, and will be for some years probably, many who will not care to depend solely upon the silo, and for these some rotation of supplemental crops will be necessary.
In the preparation of this rotation, let us bear in mind two things: First, that no green crop should be fed till it has so far approached maturity as to yield its maximum amount of food units; and second, that every green crop and every root crop that will be eaten readily by animals may be fed to advantage, as variety, with other crops.
Supplemental crops of all kinds should be planted on well-drained land, conveniently located for feeding, either at the barn or in the pasture. The land should be well prepared because we desire the largest possible amount upon a given area, and it must be conveniently located to avoid unnecessary labor in feeding. For many years we practiced feeding these crops in the pasture, and when the pasture is on arable land, or even if it is to be kept in pasture permanently, this is a good plan. It lessens labor, prevents waste, and economizes the fertilizing value of the crops fed.

To one who must prepare a supplemental crop for early spring, I would recommend rye, sown so as to get a good start in the fall. If sown early and thickly it may be fed this fall by turning stock upon it, without injury. In fact, I have sometimes thought I secured a larger crop on fall fed pieces. This rye will come on early in the spring, and should be fed as soon as the heads are well formed. If there should be any danger of some of it getting too ripe before feeding, cut and hay it at once.
While rye does nicely for this purpose, its chief value lies in the fact that it affords a succulence when it cannot be obtained from any other green crop.
Following the rye will come oats, or clover and peas, the latter sown on the furrows and well worked in with a disc spring tooth harrow, the oats to be sown after two or three days have passed, and worked in with the harrow. These will come along, if sown early and the work is well done, in season to lap on to the rye. In fact, I have sometimes fenced off a portion of the early oat field (no peas sown) and allowed the cows to graze it, with most excellent results.
If feeding is begun before the heads begin to form, and is not too severe, the oats will keep on growing, and the amount of food so secured will be surprising. Pieces of oats may be sown in succession, if desired, in order to afford an abundance until other supplemental crops appear. Still, usually, there will be portions of the grass fields that can be cut early to fill in any vacant spaces.
Portions of the rye ground can be again fertilized and sown to millet, which this year has made a fine supplemental crop.
Any surplus that may be left from any of these crops may be hayed and thus made to supplement the hay crop for winter feeding.
Having provided ourselves with plenty of the small growing crops to last well along into August, we can now consider the one supplemental crop that can be grown to the best advantage and fed to the best advantage for the longest time, which is corn in its different varieties.
I prefer some of the smaller growing varieties of sweet corn for early feeding, but would always aim to grow a large variety as is consistent with the time desired for its use. For this purpose it may be sown in drills, the smaller varieties three and four stalks to the foot, the larger varieties two to the foot. By drill sowing more food will be obtained and less labor required in hoeing.
With occasional feeds of something else that may come handy, this succession of corn (fed with the well formed ears on it) will be readily eaten, in sufficient quantities to ensure a maximum growth or milk flow, up to the time of severe frosts, and then, unless the silo is ready, something else must be provided.
It may not be generally known that oats, barley and peas are not injured for feeding by fall frosts, but such is the case.
By using some of the land from which the early crops were taken, or thoroughly preparing other land, the feeder may use any of these plants, from the field, until snow comes. I have found that the cows would eat them readily when cut after light falls of snow, and they were still green and succulent.
I found that pumpkins formed quite a proportion of the fall food for shoats in the West, and from a limited experience in feeding them to cows I am inclined to give them the favorable place in the list of supplemental feeds, particularly to use in the fall, during the change from the pasture to the barn. Large quantities may be grown on a small area by special preparation of the ground.
Last of all, I wish to call the attention of Maine farmers and dairymen to the value of some of the root crops, both as supplemental crops for the pasture and the hay mow, and as a possible substitute for at least a part of the high priced purchased grains. On well prepared land, with care in planting and with modern tillage implements, they may be grown cheaply; they are succulent and palatable.
For the growing animal the small potatoes and rutabagas, and for the cows in milk sugar beets and mangolds form valuable supplemental feeds. Not only are animals kept healthy and well nourished by their use, but beets are now used largely by professional feeders, who are pushing cows for records or for advances in the registry. In fact, they are almost entirely taking the place of heavy concentrates, with these feeders.
Let us all not neglect the hay crop but in its cultivation, let us unite in our rotation such supplemental crops as shall yield us the largest possible amount of food units for our land and our labor, and ensure us against the drought which is all too sure to come during some portion of the growing season. [Agricultural Bulletin.

The Apple Crop.
The September report of the department of agriculture gives an account of the apple crop in the United States.
The figures show a general condition of 61.1 for the entire country, or the same as a month ago and compared with 34.7 a year ago.
In Maine the condition is 45, against 55 a month ago and 70 a year ago.

The Mighty Power of Mi-o-na Mi-o-na, that extraordinary and perfect stomach tonic, will relieve dyspepsia in twenty-four hours.
It will cure and is guaranteed by Noyes Drug Store to the readers of the Norway Advertiser to cure the most prevalent cases of dyspepsia, if taken according to directions.
Mi-o-na not only cures dyspepsia, but all stomach disturbances, such as vomiting of pregnancy, sea or car sickness, and the stomach sickness after excessive indulgence.
Mi-o-na cures by strengthening and invigorating the flabby stomach walls, and
after a course of Mi-o-na treatment, consideration, if there is any, will entirely disappear.
Read this from the president of a New York corporation:
"I have been a terrible sufferer from dyspepsia and gastritis for two years.
The most eminent physicians prescribed for me with no effect. I have been absolutely cured by your Mi-o-na tablets.
The first one gave me a relief almost incredible."—Herbert H. Taylor, 501 West 143 Street, New York City.
Mi-o-na is a most economical treatment—a large box of tablets costs only 50 cents at Noyes Drug Store and the dyspeptic, nervous or otherwise, who does not give them a trial, is losing an opportunity to regain health. 38-50

Funds come so slowly to both the Re-neither of them is able to carry out its policy in inaugurating a very extensive thankful for that.

Most of the Republican newspapers appear to have overlooked the fact that Arkansas went Democratic the other day at its state election, with a very consideither Maine or Vermont went Republi-

100 Miles State Road.
When asked just how much road improvement there would be in the State in miles built, Paul D. Sargent, State highway commissioner, said that the figures were not all in yet, so that it was impossible to make a definite statement.
He estimated that the total mileage of State road constructed during this summer would aggregate 100 miles.
He based this upon the amount of money which would be spent in the work. This money will total about $250,000. It averages to cost about $2,500 to build a mile of State road.
The present year Mr. Sargent has made a new departure. He is employing 15 field men, known as inspectors. The law provides that when once a town shall request it the commissioner shall name a man to visit the work, make suggestions and see that the best work possible is done.
It is under this provision of the road law that the inspectors are appointed.
These men make daily reports to Mr.
Sargent of the work which they have inspected and suggestions which they have made, as well as their reason for so doing. Each man is an experienced road builder and the best the commissioner can get.
Burned from Lightning.
Sept. 24th, at 3.15 p. m., during a heavy thunder shower which broke the long drought, a bolt of lightning struck the stable of Charles Lapham, a contractor, at North Rumford and the flames spread so that the entire set of buildings was burned flat. A piano and some furniture was saved. The entire loss will approximate $3,000 and there was an insurance of $1,000 on the buildings and $500 on the furniture.
With the help of the men who were piling logs near there nearly everything was taken from the house. Their horse and wagon was saved but they lost a harness and sleigh. The buildings had only been built about six years.
No Error.
Herbert had a way of telling make-believe stories about the things he saw and his mother wished to convince him that they were not true. So, one day, when he saw a dog pass and began a story about its being a grizzly bear, she bade him away and pray God to forgive him for telling an untruth.
Very soon he returned and exclaimed:
"God says that's all right, mother.
He thought it was a grizzly, too."

A Famous "Hide."

A Reminiscence of Prohibition Days When Seizures Were of Frequent Occurrence.

Talk of the recent Maine election and the resubmission sentiment then made manifest in the State put the party of gentlemen gathered into a reminiscent vein, and many were the stories told about the "underground-railway" in Maine and incidentally recalled to one member of the party the story of a famous "hide" in a famous building in Gorham used for many years in the conduct of the liquor traffic.

In the days to which the speaker referred almost any means were resorted to obtain the indictment of liquor sellers. Just before court time almost everybody who had a reputation for drinking felt a little suspicious when he saw the sheriff in his vicinity, fearing that he might have a "summons" for him to appear before the grand jury and testify as to whether he had bought any liquor within a given time of this or that man who was supposed to be in the business.

The man in the liquor business was always on the lookout for the sheriff, and if he was seen in the vicinity of a "thirst parlor" business was mighty quiet till the sheriff had disappeared. But sometimes the sheriff dropped in without anyone having caught sight of him till he appeared in the bar, and then there was a great bustle to get the "hard stuff" out of the way, leaving the beer to satisfy the sheriff's thirst, (a beer fine was only ten dollars). Sometimes the officer didn't get any beer, and then a search of the whole premises would follow. In Gorham the local sheriff, some years ago, had searched a certain place a number of times without finding anything stronger than beer, although he knew that the beer end of the business was comparatively small. Search as he would he could not find the "hide," and would have to leave without the evidence needed to convict.

But there came a change. One day the sheriff and his assistants called at the place, read the warrant to the proprietor, who had previously disposed of the little liquor he had behind the bar by tipping over the pitcher in the sink, and started in to search, as he had done many times before. But this instance there was a difference. The sheriff made immediately for the private office, removed a large picture that was hanging on the wall, removed a part of the wall, which was built to be removed at will, and there before him in the partition were several faucets attached to galvanized iron tanks. Then commenced the work of following up the tanks, which were found to extend up to the third or attic floor of the building. The liquor was taken up to the third floor and the tanks filled from there. When any of it was wanted it was drawn from the faucets behind the picture in the private office on the first floor.

This discovery put the liquor business in that particular building on the burn for a time, though a saloon has been operated there at different times in the ten years or so that have since intervened. So far as we know the sheriff never told anyone how he found out about the "hide" that had so long baffled him. As all this happened long ago he might tell if you asked now. His name is—but some of you know who he is, and it will be easy for those who do not to find out.

There is a private house in Gorham, built not so very many years ago, though in the years when there was more or less raiding of liquor dealers, that is said to have two cellars. One of them is entered in the usual way by a staircase from the first floor. This has the customary cellar windows. Under another part of the house is said to be another cellar without windows, and approached by means of steps kept from view by an almost unnoticeable trap door in the floor of a clothes closet. So far as known no one who ever occupied the house was engaged in the liquor business, and it is not known that the blind cellar had anything to do with the "underground railway," but from the fact that it was not far from the home of one of the proprietors of a well known resort, as well as being built at a time when the efficacy of the "hide" had become known, there are people who think the blind cellar may have been built with the idea of baffling the officers.—[Mountaineer.

TO RHEUMATISM SUFFERERS.

Scientific Treatment That Costs Nothing Unless It Cures.

Neuralgia—Anodyne's remarkable cures of rheumatism has probably caused more favorable talk and comment than any other rheumatism cure ever put on the market, as it seems unailing in curing this dread disease.

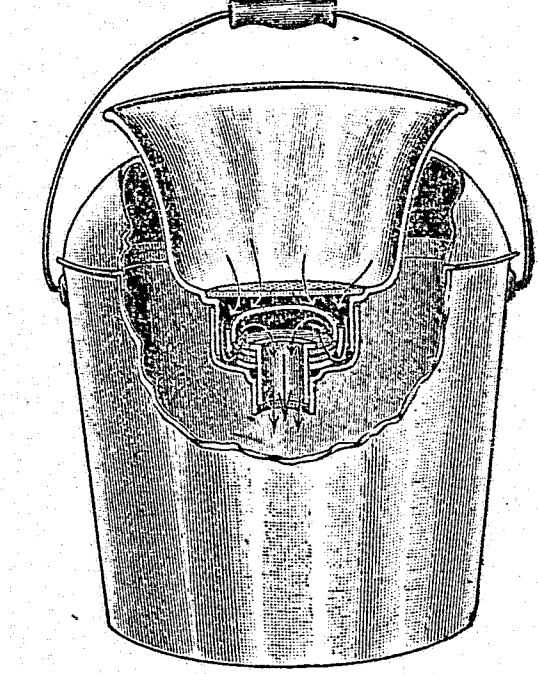

It is much more successful than ordinary rheumatism remedies, due to its action being entirely different. It is taken in small doses internally, reaching the nerve centers and driving the Tric Acid from the blood. At the same time, it is rubbed on the affected parts, and thus its curative power goes through the pores of the skin to the aching tissues and throbbing nerves, giving quick relief and cure.

So reliable is the Anodyne in curing rheumatism, neuralgia, and all aches and pains that it is sold under an absolute guarantee to refund the money if not satisfactory.

A large-sized bottle costs 25c; nothing if it does not cure. It is made by The Twitchell-Champlin Co., Portland, Me.

KEZAR FALLS.

Chronicles of the Daughters of Eve.

And it came to pass in the fifth month of the year 1904 that the daughters of Eve formed themselves into a circle, and looking out on the edifice dedicated to the Most High, they murmured among themselves, and said, "It is not meet that holy ground should be desecrated by man or beast. Behold, we will bring the matter before our lords and masters, and if they think well of this thing we will enclose the ground, and we will clear up the land of all that is unclean, and put in place thereof the incense-bearing shrub and the flower which please the eye."

And the sons of Adam gave gracious hearing to their handmaids' request, and some did even give shekels of gold and silver that the work might begin without delay. Behold! their names not written on the page of the book of Chronicles thereof?

The summer sun waxed hot and the storms of winter came on apace, but the daughters of Eve faltered not in their task. Ever bearing in their hearts memories of the far-away garden of Eden, they made light of their labor, and their desire grew within them that the surroundings of the holy temple should be as near like unto the garden of their dreams as conditions would permit.

And it came to pass that the fence was built around the temple of the Lord Most High, and the lily, the rose and the shrub set out in due order, and because that the land lacked moisture a trellis was dug, an iron tube laid thereon, and the great river of Goshen gave its store for the refreshing of the thirsty land.

And the daughters of Eve, looking upon the work, were satisfied and said one to another, "Behold! no one of us singly could have done this thing, yet together we have worked wonders." And they fell upon each others necks in great joy.

A thunder shower broke the drought in this place in the afternoon of Sept. 25th. Many wells had gone dry and brooks and springs in pastures were as though they had never been, entailing much suffering on the brute creation. Scanty herbage, lack of water and millions of flies made life miserable for our dumb friends. Thursday evening a steady rain set in for several hours and was greatly appreciated.

Mrs. Scott Watkins and Mrs. Fred Taylor met with a bad accident last Friday afternoon, while driving down a steep hill the horse for some reason became unruly and between kicking and running both ladies were thrown out, alighting unfortunately in a pile of rocks. Mrs. Watkins suffered injuries to her face, eight front teeth were broken and a shoulder displaced. Mrs. Taylor's leg was badly broken between the knee and ankle. Both ladies are well and can be expected but have suffered a good deal from their injuries.

A spirited contest resulted in the score of 4 to 1 in favor of the weave room. Then followed the field sports open to all comers: tug of war, nail driving contest, 100 yard dash, 50 yard dash, throwing ball shot, put and hammer throw. W. A. Garner, W. O. Meritt and F. L. Palmer served as judges and awarders of prizes. The proceeds were given to the Cemetery Improvement association.

GREENWOOD.

Two Automobile Accidents.

Two accidents in town owing to automobiles within a week of each other, neither resulting seriously as far as injuries were concerned.
Francis Cole driving out with a colt belonging to Mr. Hayes was the first victim, having the misfortune to meet an automobile in a narrow part of the road near Hick's pond. The colt shied quickly out of the road into a very rough and rocky place. The united efforts of the two men were insufficient to hold the animal, who, breaking away, ran a considerable distance, breaking the wagon into kindling wood.

A few days later Raymond Webber while driving with his sister, was met by an automobile driven at a high speed on a short turn in the road. The autoists had given no warning of their approach and only succeeded in stopping their machine a few feet in front of Mr. Webber's horse. By the way, was also a young colt, but usually not particularly frightened by automobiles.

In this case the appearance of the auto was so sudden that taken by surprise he backed the wagon out of the road down a steep, rocky declivity, throwing Mr. Webber and his sister backward from the wagon on the rocks. That either escaped without serious injury was a miracle. The wagon was broken slightly but the horse was unharmed.

Mr. Webber is now in a settlement with the autoists and claimed damage at $35, which was paid after some discussion on the subject. Mr. Webber was clearly within his right as there was no warning given by the occupants of the auto.

C. E. Ring, the overseer, and his family by Oct. 20.

Allen Cole is the fortunate owner of a swarm of wild bees. Some time ago he located their hive in a hollow maple and succeeded in getting them without killing the queen. It is his intention to winter them if possible.

The lack of rain is a serious hindrance to our farmers in their fall work, not only that but it is getting to be quite a serious problem with some to get a sufficient supply of water for use.

The Paris Mfg. Co. has a crew of men at work building their lumber camps for the winter. It is expected they will be finished in time to permit logging operations not later than Monday, Oct. 5th.

The Greenwood correspondent of an Oxford County paper recently commented upon the fact that previous to a rain storm he had noticed the smoke from the chimney beating down towards the ground, asking, "Is it owing to the air being heavier or lighter?" contending that there are scientists who take opposite sides on this question. That there are people who argue for both sides may be true but we are rather of the opinion that scientists agreed long ago that the air was lighter. Under normal conditions the smoke being lighter than the surrounding body of air displaces the latter. It is an old axiom in physical science that the lighter body displaces the heavier. That reminds me that there has recently been some discussions as to whether the term suction applied to a vacuum pump or only had a relative meaning. Your correspondent holds that the latter is true and that in all cases where suction appears to exert an influence upon matter pressure is the constant word to use. Will somebody kindly advise us as to the correctness of our theory.
